Synopsis Pilot:

Roby comes back from his mother’s funeral, a brilliant and eccentric engineer whose name was Esther. That night, sadden by the tragedy, Roby dreams about her. His dream starts off with beautiful memories, one in particular stands out: the night she gave him an artifact that she had built herself. This moment is quickly interrupted and the dream becomes a nightmare. A mysterious being is chasing him with a sword, this entity will be further known as Rakshasa. By the end of the dream, Roby manages to escape the evil chasing after him, yet not completely unharmed. He had cut off a lock of Robbie’s hair. Roby wakes up in fear, screaming and sobbing. His father enters the room and provides comfort, trying to convince his son that it was all “just a bad dream”. Roby soon will realize that indeed a lock of hair is missing from his head. Roby decides to go down into his mother’s workshop and investigate. Between spectrograms, radio’s bulbs and weird technology, Roby hears a call coming through. The Robosen, a group of robotic intergalactic beings are there to help him combat Rakshasa. They realize they need a special crystal in order to defeat the evil entity, soon they’ll find out the whereabouts of such crystal: it’s inside the artifact his mother had gifted him. Letting go of his grief, Roby breaks the artifact and liberates the crystal. With help of the Robosen, Roby is able to defeat Rakshasa and vanishes the entity from his home.

In a post credits scene, Rakshasa comes back into Robbie’s dreams: the battle isn’t over.
